THE mail for Kuppe &c. is indefinitely postnoned. The hars to be observed in closing the mails will be decided on the arrival of the Ganges, and the public will be duly notified. The Superintendent of the P. & O. Company, Mr E. Woodin, went out this afternoon in the Pilot Fish to see if anything could discovered with regard to the whereabouts of the steamer, a roort having been made that the vessel was seen near Tamtu by the Canton, which arrived this morning. The Pilot Fish, however, could find no trace of the mail boat. She went past Waglan nearly as far as the Nine Pins. The weather was found to be fairly clear, it being possible to see for a distance of 11 to 12 miles all round, while to- report it would save discussion. wards the South there was scarcely any fog. It is therefore feand that the Ganges has broken down, and that the big steamer which was seen mar Hongkong to-day by the Canton was the Gaelie, which left yesterday and may, hive anchored on account of the fog. The langer was, we believe, seen south of Turnsbout by the Haitan on her way down. Should she not arrive before to-morrow morning Mr Woodin intends to send the Milet in search of her.

SPEAKING on bimetallism before the Shropabire Chamber of Agriculture recently, the Right Hon. Hann Chaplin, M.P., said it was not necessarily a panaces for the existing commercial doression, but it deserved perious consideration. What was proposed was simply to report to some such system as existed up to 1873 He urged that the Government should consult other nations as to their willingness to join in a Conference for the purpose of arriving at a common understaiding upon the subject.

The fact of his being 55 minutes at titlin, his Lordship thought, was not a sufficient justification for instant dismissal. It was, of course, a very serious thing for a man in plaintiff's position to be brought out here on what appeared to be a termanent arrangement. under a clause by which he was not entitled to begin on his own account, or assist in, any similar business, to be suddenly dismissed, turned out at a moment's notice, it might be without the means of supporting himself or of getting a passage home, and he certainly did not think there was justification for that in this case. Horse-Flesh. The introduction of a Bill into Parliament for the Regulation of the Sale of Horacfiesh may be regarded as a proof of the dietetic revolution which is in progress Twenty or thirty years ago, the merest hint of Horse-flesh forming part of the ordinary food of any reasonable being would have been scoffed at: No doubt Mr Frank Buckland and his fellow-enthusiasts in the Acclimatisation Society gave terrible banquets, at which horse, and mule, and ass were served up in all sorts of shapes. But. ly : nor wore they aware of any violent though the guests affected a sort of bectic joy in the strange dishes, most of them were noticed to partake rather sparingly of of these employees were still in the firm's the menu, and several are reported to have sorvice of course he did not mean to say left the table looking very sickly. This measure is, however, not to apply to either Scotland or Ireland. Horse-flesh, we presume, not being as yet a recognised duinty in the Sister Kingdoms. . . . . It is extremely improbable that the very poorest of the English people will ever take to Horse-fish. The Briton likes to see what he is eating. He must have a joint, and his own special cut from it, and regards with well-founded suspicion any attempt to deprive him of that costly privilege by serving up his nutriment in highly-sessoned stews, or sausages which defy analysis. This expensive punctiliousness never tronbles the average Confinental outrier. On the contrary, he prefers his meat in any shape except plain roast and boiled. And remembering the quality of the Continental beef and mutton when served an naturel this peculiar fancy is not to be deplored In Paris and Vienna, Horse-flesh has long formed a regular article of diet among the poorer classes. It is publicly sold in the boucheries, and served up in the cheaper restaurants, sometimes with due soknowledgment, though more frequently as beef. In Italy, people seem absolutely indifferent to what they eat, so long as it contains some nutriment. Hippophagy is, nevertheless, an exotis taste in the Prussian capital, and, openly at least, dates from 1870, when the Germans returned victors over the French, only in their turn to be conquered by the fashions of Gaul. It is affirmed, in one of those statistical works so dear to the Teutonic mind, that seven thousand horses are every year alaughtered in Berlin, the flesh of which is parily sold as ' Pferdeffeisch,' and partly manufactured into sausages. At one time, it was rare. even in the 'seventy-five pfeanig restaurations,' to be served with avowed Horse-flesh.
